On the day before Christmas, one of the Lindsay girls, Elizabeth, recalled the following events:
"Father came in from the yard and called mother and the family together and said 'I can see Brother Miller walking to town through the snow. He is probably going to Heber to buy something to make Christmas for his little family. I'm sure that after the expenses he has had to meet that he won't have much to spend. Now, why don't you all go through your belongings and each one select something you like real well to give to this family and we will have it all ready for him when he comes back from town. Mother will direct you and help you to get a gift for each of the family.'
"We all agreed. We didn't have toys and books and jewelry such as we have today, but we all found something to contribute. I don't remember what each one gave, but Rob divided up his choice colored pencils and sent half of them to Niels. Mother found underwear for each one. There were a few toys and a book. I put my only 'store' doll in the pack. It was a choice, china-headed darling with shiny black china hair. I loved it, and no other doll that I ever owned afterwards quite took its place. It went to Minnie. I also sent a tin breast pin with a picture on it to Lana. Another doll was added for Lana who was the younger girl.
"When the bundle was all tied up it contained something for each child besides cookies and candy, and it was really a big, interesting bundle. Father took it down to the road when he saw Brother Miller
